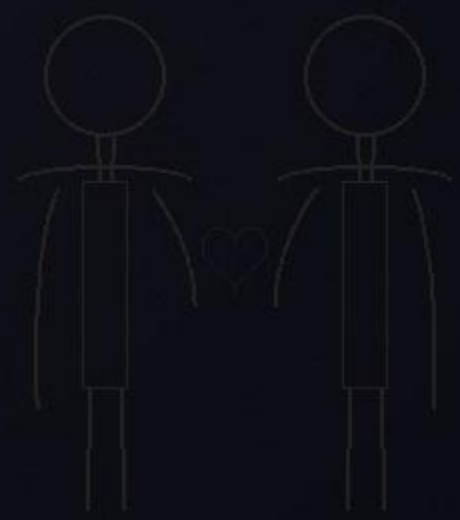
You Showed Up. That Matters.

On the hard days — when getting out of bed felt like enough — you still showed up. I want to honor that.

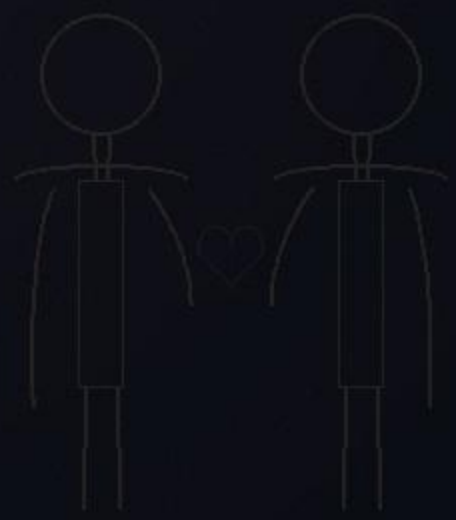
Showing up is the work.

When anxiety is loud. When grief is heavy. When nothing feels like it's moving. Showing up anyway — to the day, to yourself, to the people who need you — is not small. It's everything.



Being seen heals something deep.

One of the most fundamental human needs is to be witnessed — to have someone say 'I see you and you matter.' This is the heartbeat of every good therapy relationship.



Your story is not too complicated.

Your struggles are not too much. Your questions are not too dark. You are worthy of being known — fully, honestly, without performance.

You are seen.
You are known.
You matter.

Drop a ⍰ if this landed for you today.