Anxiety Is Not a Lack of Faith.

I've sat with so many believers who carry double weight — the anxiety itself, and the shame of having it. Let me say this clearly: your nervous system is not a spiritual failure.

Anxiety is a neurological signal.

When anxiety spikes, your amygdala fires a threat response before your prefrontal cortex can reason. This isn't weakness — it's wiring. And it happens to some of the most faithful people I know.

Faith and anxiety can coexist.

Paul asked for the thorn to be removed three times. God didn't take it. He gave grace instead. Needing help isn't the absence of faith — sometimes it IS the faith.

Therapy and prayer work together.

One trains your nervous system. The other restores your soul. You don't have to choose. In my practice, we bring both into the room.

Faith and mental health belong together.
