RELEASING

What Are You Releasing This Week?

Sometimes we don't need a new strategy. We just need permission to put something down.

Release is not giving up.

There's a difference between surrendering to defeat and consciously letting go of what you can't control. One depletes you. The other frees you. Both feel scary from the inside.

What are you carrying that isn't yours?

A conversation that looped without resolution. Guilt over something past. Anxiety about a future you can't see yet. These deserve to be named — and then released.

A simple practice.

Write down one thing you've been carrying. Pray over it. Breathe into it. Consciously let it go for today. Release is a practice, not a one-time event.

You have permission to let it go.

Comment what you're releasing this week. We're in it together.